The Temple in Jerusalem

When King David enlarged the city of Jerusalem, he wanted to build a permanent place of worship for Yahweh, but Yahweh did not allow him to do so. Instead Yahweh told David to collect fine woods, gold, and gems for the Temple. Then David's son, Solomon, would direct the building when he became king. This happened as Yahweh said. Solomon's men labored seven years to build an earthly Temple that would show a portion of the glory of Yahweh's heavenly Temple. People came from far and wide to marvel at this wondrous house of prayer in Jerusalem.

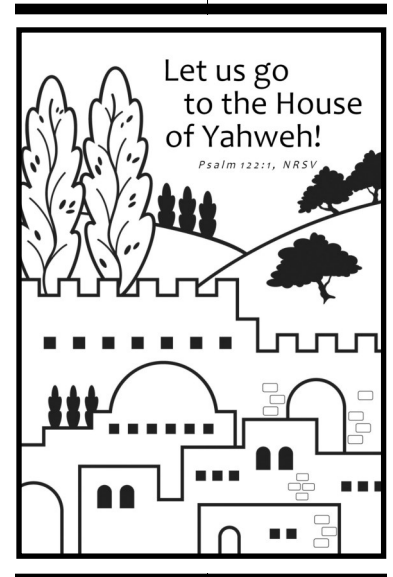

An interesting side note is that when King David's many sons grew up, they wanted their father's power and wealth for their own. They convinced other people to join in this rebellion. But a priest named Zadok remained loyal to David. Zadok made sure the Ark of the Covenant traveled with David's army so that Yahweh would be with them. In time, it was Zadok that anointed Solomon, king! For many generations, Zadok's descendants served Yahweh faithfully.

Sadly, the Temple was eventually destroyed by the Babylonians, under King Nebuchadnezzar. His army surrounded the walls and allowed no food to enter. For four months, the people starved. When the people were too weak to defend themselves, the Babylonian army stormed the city and took away all the treasures of the Temple. They led away the skilled workers and leaders. Then the soldiers burned everything of importance to the ground. We look forward to the future when Yahweh establishes His people in the Kingdom.
